

Prairie Fire Publishing

“We encourage revolutionary writers and artists to be active in forming intimate contacts with the workers, peasants and soldiers, giving them complete freedom to go among the masses and to create a genuinely revolutionary literature and art. Therefore, here among us the problem is nearing solution. But nearing solution is not the same as a complete and thorough solution. We must study Marxism and study society, as we have been saying, precisely in order to achieve a complete and thorough solution. By Marxism we mean living Marxism which plays an effective role in the life and struggle of the masses, not Marxism in words. With Marxism in words transformed into Marxism in real life, there will be no more sectarianism. Not only will the problem of sectarianism be solved, but many other problems as well.”

— Mao Zedong, Talks at the Yenan Forum on Literature and Art (1942)

Communists in Formation and Revolutionaries of the U.S.,

Prairie Fire Publishing was conceived by a small collective of comrades in the aftermath of the split and subsequent dispersion of revolutionaries in the United States. The movement, already weakened by ideological underdevelopment and sectarianism, was further wounded by the sinister attacks and plots orchestrated by the Politically Degenerate Right Liquidationists (PDRL). This dispersion also led to the untimely closure of Fourth Sword Publications, a publishing house that had been showing great promise in terms of quality and impact.

While there may not be a direct successor to Fourth Sword Publishing, the beacon of a genuine educational and cultural front still shines brightly. With great revolutionary optimism, we are pleased to announce the launch of Prairie Fire Publishing on October 12th. We ask you, comrade, to assist us in spreading the word about this endeavor and to find great utility in both our free educational pamphlets and our high-quality physical products, including books, stickers, and posters.

Please write to us with any suggestions, criticisms, questions, or relevant information.
